Rotten Tomatoes was started up as a classic punk rock trio by three dudes loved rock and roll and to hang out together. After a while a new member joined the band in 2007. They did it to make the sound of their music more rich and unique. So they started to evolve their own sound and Rotten Roll music style, keeping characteristics of punk rock to a certain extent.

As a result of it their first LP was recorded in 2009. The album was called Rotten Roll. The LP contains 12 songs written primarily in Hungarian language, but 7 tracks out of it were recorder in English too (was released separately). They shot also a video for one of the songs from the album. The gigs in late 2009 and 2010 were about to promote the LP while they kept writing new songs. As a success of the efforts, in 2010 the band was invited by Hungarian Television to its music program, to Sztár Sáv (Star Zone), where they played 2 songs, were interviewed and the video of the first LP was broadcasted for the first time.

An EP, called At Least We Tried, was recorded early 2011. The 6 tracks of it were in English language and represents something new again compared to the Rotten Roll album both in sounds and dynamics. During 2011 the band played on both most important and biggest Hungarian festival, Sziget Festival and VOLT festival while continuously doing gigs both in country and abroad.

Continuing the formerly released EP, from December 2011, Rotten Tomatoes has been in studio preparing their 2nd LP which will contain 11 tracks and supposed to be out at the end of February 2012. The rest of 2012 will be spent on promoting the new stuff with full strength and trying to reach the awaited breakthrough.

Beside the above things, the band have been very active to invigorate the music life in Hungary, by inviting and playing together with lot of very good foreign bands: Time Again (USA, HellCat Records), Good Knives (UK), Whiskey Rebels (USA), Rat City Riot (USA), New Disaster (USA), Born To Loose (USA), Safety First Gonzales (GER), Heartbreak Stereo (FIN), Heart Attack Radio (BE).

One of their cover song (Depeche Mode – Just can't get enough) was selected and put to a German Depeche Mode Rock Covers record. The German Punkrockers Radio put 2 of their songs on the playlist, and one of these songs on their first compilation CD, as the only song by a band from this region.
